Sápmi Nature Camp does not have any electricity in the camp, nor do we have running water/sewer. To make sure that you will be able to capture your experience with your camera, we will use a generator to charge camera batteries during your stay. For a couple of hours each evening, you will be able to charge the batteries to be ready for the next day. When it comes to showers, we will heat up the wood heated sauna in the evening day 2 and day 3 so that you can take a “shower” in the sauna like the locals use to do. Don’t worry, we will explain how it works and you will both enjoy and get refreshed by this great, natural experience.
